

TAKE ACTION

Introduction

TALMUD KIDDUSHIN 40B

Rabbi Elazar son of Rabbi Zadok said: To what are the righteous compared in this world? To a tree whose trunk is rooted in a place of holiness and whose boughs spread out to a place of impurity. Even if the boughs are cut off, its body stands in a pure place...

Rabbi Tarfon and the sages were gathered in the upper chamber of Nitzah's house in Lod, where they were asked which is greater, study or action. Rabbi Tarfon answered: action is greater. Rabbi Akiva answered: study is greater. The rest answered: study is greater, for study leads to action.

Just as a tree depends both on its trunk and its boughs, so too does changing the world depend on the interplay of study and action.

One important step on the path is connecting to news sources and advocacy groups you trust, so you can stay informed of the latest developments in broader efforts to end mass incarceration. Following are a few suggestions to get you started.

“We who believe in freedom cannot rest until it comes.”

This is the refrain of “Ella’s Song,” written by Dr. Bernice Johnson Reagon from words spoken by the civil rights leader Ella Baker over the years.⁵⁰⁷ This section of the handbook offers some frameworks for moving beyond study to action.

An over-arching guiding principle of the campaign against mass incarceration is that, as much as possible, it should be led by those most affected by it: the currently and formerly incarcerated, their families, and their wider communities. As Glenn E. Martin of Just Leadership USA says, “Those closest to the problem are closest to the solution, but furthest from resources and power.”⁵⁰⁸

Baker was a director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, as discussed in Jelani Cobb’s March 2016 New Yorker article about the Black Lives Matter movement: “New scholarship [has] beg[un] charting the contributions of women, local activists, and small organizations—the lesser-known elements that enabled the grand moments we associate with the civil-rights era. In particular, the career of Ella Baker...” See <http://www.newyorker.com/magazine/2016/03/14/where-is-black-lives-matter-headed>

THE RECORD, FROM THE MARSHALL PROJECT

For those not interested in a daily email digest, The Marshall Project offers a database, indexed by topic. They write, “Since 2014, The Marshall Project has been curating some of the best criminal justice reporting from around the web. In these records you will find the most recent and the most authoritative articles on the topics, people and events that are shaping the criminal justice conversation.” This is a crucial resource for anyone who wants to end mass incarceration.
