Come and sit, exalted guests!
As we invite to the table our ancestors Avraham and Sarah and the human rights heroes of our era, may we be inspired by their hospitality and courage to open our hearts to those who live without the protection of home, those who have been unjustly evicted from their homes, those housed in isolation against their will, and those made to feel this land can never be a true home for them.

May it be your will, O God, that your presence find a home among us, and that we set a table of justice for our guests and for all those who labor so that we may eat.

May we work to remove the causes of suffering and injustice, and uphold the rights of all human beings to a safe and secure home.

Spread peace over us all like a sukkah, And let us say Amen.
